"Children all over the world love to do the same things, they are not different. We have the naughty ones, we have the smart, intellectual ones. Children are able to be children, they are curious about everything and have no prejudices – i.e. they don't see colour-differences. Adults have to be aware of what they tell their kids. Learning starts with children and it will change all our perception of the world if we only listen to what they are saying!"
