

Gisela Nacken studied Architecture & Town Planning . Director of the Department of Environment & Planning (City of Aachen), responsible for public buildings, traffic, gardens, parks & environment . since 1999 supporting the Agenda 21-partnership through the city-government of Aachen . 2003 member of the CT-delegation . “Exchanges of people world-wide and to work together with people from the other side of the world, this is the most important thing. You get a realistic measurement for the real problems of the world – water, energy, climate. They can only be solved globally. – I loved to see that young people around Cape Town are enthusiastic to go to school, to learn and therefore to get opportunities for their lives.”

exchange of people & opinions other way of life & point of views friendship culture experiences interesting meetings & encounters